THE SCRANTON OF TODAY.

Come and inspect our city.
Elevation above the tide, 740 feet.
Extremely healthy.
Estimated population, 1894, 103,000.
Registered voters, 20,000.
Value of school property, $750,000.
Number of school children, 12,000.
Average amount of bank deposits, $10,000,000.
It is the metropolis of northeastern Pennsylvania.
Can produce electric power cheaper than Niagara.
No better point in the United States at which to establish new industries.
See how we grow:
Population in 1870.....9,223
Population in 1880.....25,000
Population in 1890.....65,500
Population in 1894 (estimated).....103,000
And the end is not yet.

From the size and enthusiasm of yesterday's audiences it seems fair to assume that the voters of Lackawanna county know when they have had enough of Democratic times.

The Future of Silver.

It is a significant fact, in connection with the interview with William Connell, elsewhere in this issue, that the only party which offers hope to the west is the Republican party. It has pronounced unequivocally in favor of bimetalism, and it means what it says. It is not a party of extremists, and it will not promise the impossible. But it has a consistent record of meeting every real emergency without sacrifice of any honest interest.
It would be idle to deny that the condition of the west, as depicted by fair-minded visitors from the east who have no axe to grind, is one which calls for legislative action further than that taken by congress in its recent special session. It would not be safe to repeat this question while the control of the government is vested in inexperienced and inefficient hands. The country will never consent to the introduction of disturbing innovations. It has no more money to lose on visionaries and cranks.

But it can certainly afford, when this free trade insurance shall be safely conquered by Republican ballots, to proceed to a conservative and yet kindly consideration of western coinage claims. The principle of protection to American industries is not restricted, in the minds of honest Republicans, to any section. It applies with equal cogency and force to the west as it does to the east; and to the south as well as to the north. If it shall be possible, as Mr. Connell suggests, to coin American silver at a prudent rate without incurring the danger of being swamped by an influx of foreign bullion, who would object? Certainly, it is no time for extreme views on this question; and honest discussion can surely do no harm.

The effort of the Democrats to stir up prejudice against John H. Thomas will fail, for the obvious reason that prejudice is not deciding things in this campaign. Common sense is in command, and common sense points to Mr. Thomas' re-election as the proper tribute to be paid to faithful and efficient public service.

A Lack of Confidence.

In view of the fact that a number of operatives have recently been temporarily suspended at the ordinarily prosperous Luzerne Knitting mills in West Pittston, a representative of the Pittston Gazette has interviewed Mr. Ellithorp, the efficient manager, as to the cause for such an unusual course. His reply is a whole volume of condensed business fact, as compared with the fictitious trade booms which are being manufactured before election, in the offices of the Democratic newspapers; and it takes on additional significance when one knows the conservative and truthful character of the man.
Mr. Ellithorp said that this slack condition of trade is general. Nearly all of the New England mills are also running short-handed. Ordinarily, he said, the Luzerne mills, at this season of the year, have been kept in operation at their full capacity preparing for the next season's trade, but a combination of circumstances has made it necessary now to curtail the product. Mr. Ellithorp attributes the present dullness to the general business depression that has prevailed for a year past, and to the numerous labor disturbances which have tended materially to cut down the purchases of nearly all classes of people. The general feeling among the trade, he says, is that these conditions, besides resulting in the present slackness, will also result in cutting down the prices of manufactured goods during the coming season. Laboring under this expectation, merchants at the country over are carrying as little stock as they can possibly manage to get along with, in order to be prepared for the change in prices. Manufacturers necessarily follow the merchants in cutting down stock on hand, and Mr. Ellithorp says that the Luzerne mills are at present carrying the smallest stock that they have had on hand at this season during the eight years of their establishment.

It will be observed that Mr. Ellithorp does not give his explanation a political twist; and yet there is not a business man among our readers who does not know that the great and damaging uncertainty which has for eighteen months hung over trade in this country has been directly due to fears connected with Democratic tariff legislation. The Democratic party has not commanded the confidence of the business interests of the country; and a party which cannot do that cannot successfully govern this republic.

The election of a Republican majority in congress would give courage and stability to now timid and discouraged tradesmen.
Senator McDonald is already getting scared at the rapid progress of James C. Vaughan's candidacy for the state senate; but his feeling now will not be a marker to that which will possess him Nov. 7.

When, not long ago, Thomas D. Davies was approached by one of the Democratic candidates with a proposition to trade votes in each other's favor, Mr. Davies manfully rejected the overture, saying he would stand or fall with his own party ticket. Honest Republicans will not forget this when they vote next month.

The Hastings Meetings.

There is no mistaking the public enthusiasm which manifested itself yesterday at every point along the line of General Hastings' Scranton reception. From the moment of his arrival to the final word at last evening's immense mass meetings, his visit has proved a spontaneous and a significant ovation, telling eloquently of great personal popularity and no less demonstrative of the popularity of the political principles which his candidacy typifies to the patriotic citizens of this peerless industrial commonwealth. From first to last, it was an honest uprising of the people against the party and the policy which have, in the brief period of two years, plunged a prosperous nation into unprecedented panic and then jeeringly congratulated it upon its ability to recuperate.

It has been charged that General Hastings is a prophet of calamity. Who, let us ask, are the persons who utter that charge? Are they the men who have at any time during the last three decades endeavored to ward off calamity when it has threatened the business interests of their countrymen? Are they the men who have consistently sought to protect American labor against the depreciated values of free trade times? Are they the men who, by wise and conservative legislation, have inspired the investors of our country with confidence and hope? Is their record one of broad and systematic statesmanship, fitted to the needs of the nation in which they live? Or are they the men who have uniformly and persistently done the very reverse of these things; the men who rode into power upon the wave of a falsely-begotten prejudice, engendered at the expense of thrift and enterprise and subtly planned to enlist the sympathies of socialists, Populists and tramps? It would occur to any but a Democrat that the least said by the party now in power to the discouragement of calamity crying, the better for that party's own chances at the polls. It would occur to any but a Democrat that every syllable uttered in present condemnation of the Republican citation of actual and painful fact carries with it whole sentences of reproach for Democracy's own stock argument of the past—the argument which cried calamity when there was no calamity; and which, by persistent and merciless retort, finally brought on the very panic that it never expected to witness.

But the Democrat of today is unperplexed by considerations either of consistency or of common sense. Undeterred by the frightful havoc which his warfare on protected industry has already wrought, and careless of the danger attending a prolongation of that strife, he springs jauntily into the arena with lance poised for a fresh onslaught, and only awaits the re-assembling of congress to ruthlessly carry on the war. Crying peace when there is no peace, he sharpens his knife in secret for a new dig into the vitals of business stability, and cries out in hypocritical fervor when alert Republicanism discovers and exposes his treacherous design. In aiming the present campaign directly at the heart of this second ebullition of Democratic false pretense, General Hastings exhibits good generalship and superior tact. There is at this movement only one real issue before the American people. It is the issue of living wages versus idleness; of profitable investment versus stagnation and loss; of the American protective standard against the economic quicksands of clumsily imitated foreign free trade.

Upon an issue of this momentous character, Pennsylvania ought to give a verdict that shall permit neither misrepresentation nor doubt.
The Democratic party, as at present constituted, cannot command the confidence of the conservative business elements of the country. A party which cannot do that is not fit to have control of the government.

Vote for Clarence E. Pryor.

Probably no candidate stands closer to the people than genial, free-hearted Clarence Pryor, candidate for re-election as prothonotary. During the three years that Mr. Pryor has been serving the people in an official capacity no word of complaint has ever been uttered against his methods of conducting the affairs under his administration. His course has received the praise of Democrats and Republicans alike, and no one who has ever transacted business at the prothonotary's office has aught but good words for the accommodating official and his affable assistants. The efficiency of Mr. Pryor has been recognized by the Republicans with the unanimous nomination of the popular official to a second term. No other prominent Republican cared to contest his claim to the office; Mr. Pryor's faithful service to both party and trust having been observed and acknowledged by all. It seemed most fitting that he should be called to another term of service.

Mr. Pryor comes before the people with an unshaken record for his fidelity to the Republican party and to the principles which make this country the greatest upon the globe. In his official capacity as well as in private life his devotion to the sound doctrines of protection and good government will be unswerving. He owes no allegiance to the party that would ruin American prosperity in brainless experiment, and will contribute nothing in its aid. See to it that no encouragement is given Democracy this fall. Vote for Clarence E. Pryor.

Alexander Connell.

Alexander Connell comes before the laboring classes this fall as one best qualified to represent them in legislative halls at Harrisburg. All his years have been passed among the sons of toil and he is, therefore, well able to judge of the needs of the workingman. Mr. Connell was born in Minooka thirty-three years ago and has spent his entire life among the hardy workers of the South Side, whose interests he has ever had at heart. He is a true Republican and has performed effective service for his party. For several seasons he has represented his ward ably in the city councils and has been noted for his brilliancy and fearlessness.

Three years ago the Twentieth ward had a Democratic majority of 600. Mr. Connell was elected by a majority of twenty-two votes. His representation of the ward in the council chamber has been the pride of his constituents. Thoroughly versed in parliamentary rules, eloquent and forceful in debate, he has exhibited qualities of statesmanship that will place him in the front rank at Harrisburg. The laboring man who wants recognition in the state legislature will do well to cast his ballot for Alexander Connell. He is a man who understands their needs and is a man amply fortified to champion their cause.

THE FIELD OF POLITICS.

Colonel Jim Sweeney, the impetuous Hazletonian who alternates between Buck mountain and Harrisburg, is not yet ready to concede that Hazle county is an impossibility. He declares that there will, in all probability, be three positions advanced for the next legislature. The first will be a new county; the second, annexation to Carbon county; the third, an appointment of an additional law judge to hold court in Hazleton for the trial of lower end cases. There must, he thinks, be some relief, and it can only come by the passage of a law covering one or another of the above propositions. It is said by men learned in the law, that the constitution will permit of a law being passed to carry out any of the schemes mentioned.

Speaking of new counties, the effort of Carbon to achieve county seat honors is to be strengthened, it is said, by a vigorous advocacy of the separation idea on the part of the new morning daily which is soon to appear in the Pioneer City. For some reason, the legislature has not taken kindly to new counties. May be it will be different in the near future—may be.

Current gossip has it that ex-representative C. Ben Johnson will soon assume an editorial relation with the Wilkes-Barre Leader. Mr. Johnson is a well-equipped journalist, with a large store of free trade arguments that fit well into the Leader's style of politics. It couldn't get a better contributor.

FORGING AHEAD.

It Leads the Procession.
Avoca Argus: "The Scranton Tribune has been a synonym for enterprise the day it issued its first number. It has given fresh evidence of its enterprise by introducing typesetting machines which almost do away with hand composition. The result is easily seen in the Leader's style of politics. It couldn't get a better contributor."

Will Hold Its Own.

Scranton Record: "The Tribune appeared on our tables Monday morning at a time when the effect was most pleasing. Our esteemed contemporary has now quite an air of the metropolitan; and with this present force of writers will hold its own in any field. Success to the new gown; may its shadow never grow less."

Is A Model Newspaper.

Hyde Park Courier-Progress: "The Scranton Tribune has been greatly improved with a new dress of type which is composed of wonderful typesetting machines. The Tribune is a model newspaper, vigorous, bright and newsworthy in all its departments."

Is a Benefit to Labor.

Jermyn Press: "Four typesetting machines have been introduced into the composing rooms of the Scranton Tribune, and as a consequence the paper last Saturday presented a new face to its readers. The change was a vast improvement, and the proprietors are to be congratulated on the success that warranted such a step. The introduction of labor saving machinery into the printing office is not an ominous sign, as many would suppose. It may cause temporary inconvenience by the displacement of a certain proportion of compositors, but the final outcome will be more reading for the same expenditure. Compositors will still be in demand for setting advertisements and job work, and even a number of those displaced by the innovating machine will be employed to work the same, for it has been demonstrated that the expert compositor becomes the most expert operator of the typesetting machine. Slowly, but surely, the masses are recognizing the fact that so called labor saving machines actually create labor, or at least give an impetus to the demand for the same. How many centuries would it have taken to develop the resources of this great country if the only means of locomotion were the ancient, and almost forgotten, ox-cart? How many centuries would there now be in this or any other land if the only method of communicating information to the masses were the old-fashioned quill pen? How many centuries might the missionaries have labored among our heathen fellow creatures if they had not the printing press, a wonderful labor saver, as an aid? Yet it can be clearly shown that every mile of railway built has caused a corresponding demand for laborers, every improvement in the means of transportation has created a demand for the machine and its product. The introduction of the typesetting machine will simply increase the demand for reading matter, for the fortunate owners of the machine, in the case of the outstrip their less fortunate brethren, will make it a point to supply more reading for a cent than was once thought possible; and the public appetite once whetted will insist on a perennial supply. Consequently, the publisher who is in the rear will make a determined spur forward or fall out of the race, and the paper that can supply the largest possible dish of news for the smallest possible charge will be the foremost paper of the day."

We Hope to Neighbor.

Olyphant Gazette: "If a new dress is any evidence of prosperity, the Scranton Tribune is certainly in a prosperous condition. Last Saturday it came to us bearing all the appearances of a great metropolitan daily, and far surpassing some of them in the quantity and quality of news, both local and telegraphic, which it dished up in an entertaining manner. The type was set by four of the great Mergenthaler Linotype machines, the first to be brought into this section of the country. The Tribune is the leading daily newspaper of northeastern Pennsylvania and we do not doubt but it will one day forge ahead of any in the state."

THE POPULIST PLATFORM.

It's a heap of consolation, this general stagnation, when we find a fellow mortal, an official, or a state, that we can just get a shot at, curse, labor, and get hot at—we can stand so much the better the unhappy frowns of fate.
How it fosters resignation if the tide of emigration strands our bark upon a sand bar, where it seldom rains or snows.
To attribute lack of ration to the banks and corporations—how the fireless faces brighten! what intelligence it shows!
What we want's a clap of thunder that will burst the banks asunder—a division of the plunder is the thing for which we sigh.
But to talk of thrift of labor, that may help to feed my children, but for my I must confess, it's just a little bit too dry.
I'm a true-born politician, and it plainly is my mission to secure a seat in congress when my bleeding country calls.
That is why I am engaging in the war the pops are waging, though the Northwest winds are raging in my summer overalls.
—Mart Howe in Nebraska State Journal.
